

WHITE PAPER

HOLLYWOOD FAILED, NOW IT'S YOUR TURN.

Hollywood has fallen on hard times. Too often, studios and gatekeepers have put political activism ahead of story, craft, and what audiences actually want to watch. The result is fewer risks on new voices, thinner trust from viewers, and a growing gap between people who love film and the system that claims to serve them.

Cut exists to close that gap. It is a crowdfunding and streaming surface that connects filmmakers with communities that fund and watch the work they care about. Cut does not push a political leaning. It is designed as an impartial, community-driven film industry: discovery through votes, funding through pledges, and finished films through a simple subscription — with on-chain rules so backers can see how value is supposed to flow.

ABSTRACT

Cut lets filmmakers of all kinds upload previews (hosted on YouTube and embedded on Cut), climb an Imgur-style Hot / New feed via upvote and downvote, and raise production money when users pledge $CUT. Campaigns that miss their goal refund pledges in full. When a film is finished, it streams on Cut behind a $3.99/month subscription. Funded backers receive a film-specific NFT whose weight equals the USD value of $CUT they pledged; that weight sets their share of the film's backer revenue pool. Of reported film revenue (including subscription attributed to that title), Cut takes 25%: 15% buys $CUT on the open market for those NFT holders, and 10% goes to the treasury — creating recurring buy pressure as more films succeed.

PROBLEM

Independent and emerging filmmakers struggle to raise capital without studio politics or opaque middlemen. Traditional crowdfunding rarely ties fans to ongoing economics. Speculative tokens often ship with no product. Viewers, meanwhile, are tired of being told what they ought to watch instead of being allowed to elevate what they enjoy. Cut combines open discovery, transparent pledging, a Netflix-style watch product, and a clear revenue-linked token loop on a consumer-friendly EVM chain (Robinhood Chain).

SOLUTION

Discovery — Hot and New

New is the user-submitted surface: chronological uploads so people can find hidden gems before they are famous. Hot is the front page: ranked by community upvotes and downvotes so popular, audience-loved work rises without a studio committee. Preview pages show trailer/embed, pitch, funding goal, progress, and a pledge call to action. No editorial political filter is built into ranking. Visibility is community-driven.

Funding With $Cut

Creators set a goal and deadline. Users pledge $CUT from MetaMask, Robinhood Wallet, or other EVM wallets. Missed goals from the creators result in a 100% refund of users pledges. Met goal = funds release to the creator per campaign rules (a small platform funding fee may apply at launch; ~5% is the planning default).

Watching finished films

Previews stay free on YouTube and embedded on Cut. Finished films stream on Cut for $7.99/month. The movie file is stored and streamed offchain. Access and economics are tied on-chain where it matters: backer NFTs (below), not by stuffing the video onto the blockchain.

Backer NFTs

When a campaign funds successfully, each backer receives an NFT for that film. The NFT records the USD value of $CUT pledged at pledge time. That weight determines the holder's pro-rata share of the film's backer pool among all backer NFTs for that title. Transfer rules can be refined at launch; the economic intent is "your pledge size = your share."

Revenue share via buybacks

Of reported film revenue (including subscription revenue attributed to that film):

Share	Use
75%	Filmmaker / rights holders
15%	Buy $CUT on the open market and distribute to that film's backer NFT holders by weight
10%	Cut treasury

This is the flywheel: more films watched and earning = more buy pressure on $CUT distributed to backers who believed early.

ALLOCATION

Bucket	%	Role
Community & liquidity	40%	DEX liquidity and early community distribution
Film reward pool	25%	Incentives for projects that hit funding goals
Team & advisors	20%	4-year vest, 1-year cliff
Treasury / ops	10%	Runway, partnerships, operations
Ecosystem grants	5%	Tools, creators, integrations

Utility

Medium of pledge for campaigns

Asset purchased in market buybacks for backer NFT holders

Ecosystem incentives from the film reward pool (post-MVP)

PRODUCT PRINCIPLES

- Audience first Hot/New ranking reflects what people actually engage with.
- Impartial rails Cut provides infrastructure; it does not endorse a political agenda.
- Skin in the game Pledges are real; failed goals refund in full.
- Clear economics Subscription price, NFT weights, and the 75 / 15 / 10 split are public.
- Ship in phases Escrow and discovery before automated buybacks and full NFT polish.

CLOSING

Cut is a bet that a healthier film culture looks like open discovery, honest pledges, and audiences paying for work they choose — not a studio lecture. Hollywood failed on trust; the community can rebuild it one preview, one upvote, and one funded film at a time.
